The Thoresby Society.

The Society was formed in 1889 for antiquarian, historical and genealogical objects in connection with Leeds and District, and issues to its members publications of local interest.

Subscription (including publications for the year), 10s. 6d. per annum. Life Fee, £5 5s.

President: J. E. BEDFORD, F.G.S.; Hon. Treasurer: G. D. LUMB, F.S.A., 63, Albion Street, Leeds; Hon. Librarian and Curator: Miss Emily Hargrave, 8, Valley Terrace, Moortown, Leeds; Hon. Secretaries: B. P. Scattergood, M.A., 7, Cookridge Street, Leeds, and Herbert Wm, Thompson, 35, Virginia Road, Leeds.

The Librarian will be glad to receive gifts of deeds, MSS., and other documents and books relating to Leeds or the West Riding.

The following is a list of the publications of the Society. Volumes and parts to complete sets, etc., may be purchased at the undermentioned prices. Applications, accompanied by remittance, should be addressed to either the Treasurer or Librarian. Postage extra.

LOTHERTON CHAPEL, BEFORE THE LATE REPAIRS.

LOTHERTON CHAPEL, BEFORE THE LATE REPAIRS.

LOTHERTON CHAPEL: NORTH DOORWAY. September, 1919.

LOTHERTON CHAPEL, FROM THE SOUTH. September, 1919.

Lotherton Chapel (IA.R. Yorks.).

By G. E. KIRK.1

Lotherton cum Aberford, a township and chapelry, originally in the parish of Sherburn-in-Elmet and Barkston Ash Wapentake, was formally annexed to Aberford, by Order in Council, in August, 1908. It is about five and a half miles south of Tadcaster and three north-west of Sherburn.

Lotherton Chapel, which is a private one, stands just over a mile south-east of the village of Aberford, in the grounds of Lotherton Hall, the residence of Colonel F. R. T. Trench-Gascoigne, D.S.O., J.P., lord of the manor and chief landowner.

According to the late Professor Moorman,² we have in the word Lotherton apparently the O.E. personal name, Hlothhere, with the addition of the patronymic -ing, -inga.

The original form, Hlohheringatun, meaning the enclosure of the sons of Hlothhere, was subsequently reduced to Lotherington or Lutherington, and then, with the loss of the patronymic -ing, to Lotherton.

The following forms of the place-name occur in mediæval and later documents, the various forms occurring at varying dates:

The site is of ancient interest, being within a mile of the Roman road from Castleford to York. Leland (temp. Hen. VIII) declares that he "never saw yn any Part of England so manifest Tokens as heere of the large high Crest of the Way of Wateling Streate made by hand."

Sherburn, capital of the ancient Kingdom of Elmete, is traditionally believed to have been, in the tenth century, a royal manor of the Anglo-Saxon kings. It has frequently been stated that after the battle of Brunanburgh, in 937, King Athelstan, as a votive offering for his victory, gave this manor to the See of York. The present writer, after consulting eminent Yorkshire antiquaries, has failed to trace any charter embodying such a grant. Camden (d. 1623) was aware of the impression (Britannia, iii); and Drake (Eboracum, 1736) mentions it; but both are silent as to authority.

If a thirteenth century document can be trusted, there appears in a claim of Archbishop Wickwane, A.D. 1279 or 1280, to be a reference to Sherburn as among the manors granted by King Athelstan to the Archbishop of York and his successors (see Memorials of Ripon, i, 66, Surt. Soc., lxxiv).

Concerning the reputed grants of privileges by Athelstan, the late Mr. A. F. Leach, F.S.A., says: "Perhaps the true origin of the attribution of these privileges of northern towns and churches to Athelstan is the appearance of Athelstan in the authentic and accepted record, the 'Saxon Chronicle,' as the first king of all England. On his conquest of the northern kingdom the northern English and Danes may well have really obtained from him confirmation of their rights and privileges. At all events, in the days after the Conquest, when every English institution was threatened by the northern barbarian, and every title called in question, and when the policy of the Conqueror especially pointed to the reduction of the semi-independent North into an integral part of a united kingdom; it was no doubt expedient for those who wished to defend their rights to rest them not on the grants of Northumbrian kings and local chiefs, but on those of the monarchs of all England, to whose rights the Norman kings claimed to be successors" (Preface to The Beverley Chapter Act Book, i, Surt. Soc., xcviii).

The earliest mention of Lotherton (Luttringtun) known to the writer occurs in a grant by Kirg Edgar of 20 cassati (hides) at Sherburn-in-Elmet to Æslac, in A.D. 963.1

Unless there was an earlier grant, this would seem to do away with the idea that Athelstan granted Sherburn to the See of York. "Edgar's gift to Æslac appears to have been made as a reward for good services, with liberty to bequeath it at his death to any person or institution whom he chose to make his heir. The donor acquits the land of all burdens save trinodal service. There cannot be much doubt that Æslac bequeathed these 20 cassati at Sherburn to St. Peter's, York, and the Archbishop, in whose possession it is found early in the eleventh century." About the year 1030 we find that "eall Lutering-tun" belonged to the Archbishop of York, as pertaining to his Sherburn estates. Lotherton is not mentioned by name in the Domesday Book (1086), but it was probably one of the several berewicks of the Barony of Sherburn, then in the demesne of the Archbishop of York (Yorks. Archæol. Journal, xiii, 490n.; cf. Kirkby's Inquest, Surt. Soc., xlix, 48).

The place continued to belong to the Archbishops of York, of whom various knights' fees are known to have been held. Richard de Luttrington witnesses a charter of Richard, son of Swain, about the year 1170, also a charter of Nicholas, son of Jordan of Shippen, in 1190 (Chartulary of St. John of Pontefract, Y.A.S. Record Series, XXV, 144, 298).

Land-holders named Richard are associated with Lotherton in the early decades of the thirteenth century. Richard de Luterington occurs, for instance, in connection with a knight's fee which he held of the Archbishop of York, in Tur Langton (Leicestershire), in 1200.4 His name also appears in the Pipe Roll (1200–1),⁵ in relation to Derbyshire and Notts., and in the contemporary Rotuli Curiæ Regis.⁶ Although we do not, by these records, prove that Richard held land in Lotherton itself, it is not unlikely that he was a tenant of the Archbishop in Yorkshire as well as elsewhere. A few years later we find more explicit information. Robert de Lutrinton (sic) held one knight's fee "in Sireburne," in 1211-12,¹ and his tenure in the Sherburn Barony may well have been in Lotherton. An undated, but apparently early thirteenth century charter relating to land in Parlington and Aberford, is witnessed by "..... Robert de Lutrington, Richard, his son" (Dodsworth MS., 8 f., 182).² Richard de Lutrington appears in a grant of 1226;³ and, as Sir Richard de Luterington, knight, he witnesses an undated but probably contemporary deed.⁴ In 1252, free-warren was granted to Master Robert Haget, treasurer of York, and Gilbert de Bernevall, his assign; and heirs of the said Gilbert in the manor of Luteringaton, co. York (Charter Roll, 36 Hen. III, m. 23).

In the list of Knights' Fees held of the Archbishop of York, 1266-79, Richard de Lutrington is declared responsible for one knight's fee in Lutrington.⁵ From the Testa de Nevill we learn that Richard de Luterinton held the third part of a knight's fee in Thorpe juxta Lubbenham, Leicestershire (Testa de Nevill, 26, Record Commission).

The aforesaid Gilbert de Berneval had two daughters, Albreda and Cecily. Albreda had a son, Gilbert de Cundy. It was found by an inquisition taken in 1277 that Gilbert de Cundy, the seventeenyear old son of Gilbert de Berneval and his daughter, Cecily, who was of full age, were his next heirs. Cecily was married to Gilbert de Neville. A writ to Thomas Normanvill, the king's steward, 25 Oct., 5 Edw. I (1277), on the complaint of Gilbert de Nevill and Cecily, his wife, aunt and coheir of Gilbert de Cundy, states that the lands, etc., of Gilbert de Berneval, her father, in Aberford and Luterington, had been intruded upon by John, son of Alan Sampson, of York, asserting that he was enfeoffed of the same by the said Gilbert, 18 Feb., 6 Edw. I (1277-8).6 On 23 Nov., 1277, there was an order to Thomas Normanvill, the king's steward, touching the manor of Luterington, which the said William (sic) de Berneval held of the Archbishop of York (Calendar of Fine Rolls, 6 Edw. I, m. 29).

From an Inquisition made at York on the Thursday after the Feast of St. Matthias, 6 Edw. I (1277-8), we learn that the aforesaid John Sampson was enfeoffed by the said Gilbert of 9 messuages and 9 bovates of land in Aberford and Luterington, and he had peaceful seisin for one day and one night before the said Gilbert died, but he had no other seisin there. This, however, was regarded as unsatisfactory, and another writ, dated 18 May, 1278, orders that further inquiry be made, and that all lands and tenements be taken into the king's hand and safely kept, until further order be given therein. An inquisition dated the day of St. Denis [9 Oct.], 6 Edw. I [1278], states that John Sampson was put in seisin of the above messuages and land on the day of St. Bartholomew by the steward of the said Gilbert, who was of sane mind and good memory, by his command, in the presence of John de [E]yton, who came for the purpose on behalf of the Archbishop, the chief lord of the fee, who had hindered the said John of his seisin for a fortnight previously: on the morrow the said Gilbert died. Indorsed: Let seisin be given him (Yorkshire Inquisitions, i, Y.A.S. Record Series, xii, 182, 183; cf. Cal. Inquisitions, Edw. I, file 16 (13).

Gilbert de Nevill held a knight's fee in Lutrington in 1285. He apparently died in 1294, when, by an inquisition made at Southampton 28 July, 22 Edw. I, his next heir is found to be John de Nevill, aged 26. In 1298, the Archbishop received homage of Sir Robert Furneaux, knight, for the third part of the manor of Lotrington (Surt. Soc., xlix, 401).

In 1302, John de Nevill, son and heir of Gilbert and Cecily de Nevill, did homage and fealty to Thomas, Archbishop of York, for land held of the Archbishop in Lutrington—" for half a knight's fee and more but not for two parts." "But Sir Robert Furneaux, knight, ought, as he believes, to answer for the rest of a knight's fee because he holds the moiety of the manor and of land belonging to it, but not the rent."

In the returns of Aid granted to King Edward I (collected 1303), John de Nevill and his coparceners contributed xls. for one knight's fee in Lutrington.⁴

In 1307-8 the Archbishop again received homage and fealty of John, son and heir of Cecily de Nevill, for land which he claimed to hold in Lutrington. At the same time the claim of Sir Robert Furneaux (vide supra) to his part of the manor was recognised.⁵ In 1310-11, Sir Geoffrey de Hotham did homage for the third part of a knight's fee in Luterington, which he claimed as his wife's dower.⁶

This lady, whose name was Matilda, was possibly the widow of Gilbert de Nevill. If so, she must have been a second wife. In the Nomina Villarum (1316), Sir Geoffrey was returned as lord of, inter alia, Luterington (Surt. Soc., xlix, 259n., 345).

But the Furneaux claim was maintained for, in 1310, Archbishop Greenfield had granted to lady Christiana de Menyl, widow of the late Sir Nicholas Menyl, the marriage of Richard, son and heir of Sir Robert de Furneaux, knight, deceased, who held lands in Luterington, by knight's service.² Richard died before 29 Dec., 1331,³ for on that date Archbishop Melton granted to Robert de Bridlington the custody of the lands, etc., of Richard, son and heir of Richard de Furneaux, in the town of Luteryngton.⁴ In 1335, Lady Johanna, widow of Sir John de Nevill, claimed to hold of Archbishop Melton lands, etc., in "Luteryngton et Abirford."⁵

From this period Lotherton had an increased number of tenants. Fuller information is given by the late Mr. Wm. Wheater, in his History of Sherburn and Cawood (2nd edition, 1882). There is also a short account, with illustrations of the unrestored chapel, by Mr. Edmund Bogg, in The Old Kingdom of Elmet (1904).

One matter of antiquarian interest may be noted here. Owing to the outbreak of Plague in 1644, it was deemed necessary to transfer the Aberford market⁶ to another part of the parish—some distance from the infected area, and the market cross was removed to Lotherton. There it continued until recent years, when the original base of the cross, moss-covered and dilapidated, was discovered by some of the local antiquaries, and a scheme set on foot for removing it to its former site and restoring it as best could be done to its old condition. The scheme was consummated when, on Saturday, 15 June, 1912, the cross was unveiled by Mrs. Gascoigne, of Lotherton Hall.⁷

Our subject, however, is not Lotherton, nor the families connected therewith, but its ancient chapel.

Unfortunately, the mediæval and later records in which Lotherton of In 1251 Henry III granted "to Richard de Grammary, and his heirs, a weekly market on Wednesday at his manor of Abberford and of a yearly fair there on the vigil, the feast and the morrow of St. Richerius" (Cal. Charter Rolls, 35 Hen. III, 354). In 1335 Edward III "granted William Grammary a market on Wednesday at his mannor of Abreford " (Harleian MS. No. 802, Thoresby Soc., Miscellanea, i, 118).

is mentioned, contain no reference to the chapel. The founder's name, the date of foundation and the dedication are not disclosed. Indeed, as Mr. William Brown, Litt.D., F.S.A., observes, it is very rare that one finds the name of a founder of a chapel such as this, for they were, as a rule, founded before the Archbishops' Registers commence.

The late Canon Raine, in reference to the ancient chapels of Yorkshire, says: "Many of these little places of worship were of very early foundation; and when travelling was dangerous and the population greatly scattered, they were of inestimable service. The greater part of them were pulled down during the first ten years of the reign of Elizabeth. They had been in existence, many of them, since the Norman times. Many were erected by the religious houses, which in this respect were very attentive to their duty. Others owed their existence to the care of the Archbishops of York. The first great subdivision of parishes took place in the time of Archbishop Thurstan. About a century afterwards there was a large addition made to the number of chapels. Archbishop Gray wrote to Gregory IX stating that in consequence of the distance of the parish priest from the scattered parts of his flock, it often happened that a sick man passed away before the priest could reach him, and sought his advice in the matter. The Pope thereupon gave him leave to erect oratories and chapels. This was in 1233 (Addit. MSS. 15353, 175, from the Vatican MSS.). Most of these little shrines were destroyed after the Reformation."1

The edifice at Lotherton was probably erected in order to meet the spiritual needs of the manor, as a chapel-of-ease to the mother church of Sherburn, in whose parish it remained until 1908, when it was transferred to that of Aberford. In this case, Lotherton Chapel would be one of a class of foundations deemed necessary by the sixteenth century commissioners appointed to deal with chantries, etc. (see Preface to Yorkshire Chantry Surveys, ii, Surt. Soc., xcii).

No chantry appears to have been established at Lotherton.

In the Calendar of Patent Rolls, A.D. 1356, m. 1, 24 May, however, occurs the following: "Licence for the alienation in mortmain by John de Bentele to the prior and convent of Wartre of five messuages, a carucate of land, $3\frac{1}{2}$ acres of meadow, 40 acres of pasture and 80 acres of wood in Lutryngton and Beverley, to find a chantry according to his ordinance." But this tells us nothing as to where the chantry was founded.

Lawton seems to indicate that Lotherton was, in some sense, a Peculiar, as a chapelry within the jurisdiction of the Fenton Prebendal Court (Collections, 2, 3, 609).

The Prebend of Fenton was founded by Archbishop Gray, early in the thirteenth century. But there existed at an earlier period a Prebend of Sherburn, a certain portion of which, including the tithes of corn and pulse of Lotherton, was given to the Treasurership of York when the Prebends of Wistow and Fenton were founded (Abp. Gray's Register, Surt. Soc., lvi, 132, 133).

The ancient dedication of Lotherton Chapel does not appear to be known. Mediæval wills, usually a fruitful source of information, do not help us in this case. Canon Raine says, "If there had been no Peculiars, and if all chapels had possessed the right of burial, the dedication of every church and chapel in the county might have been verified or recovered. The documents connected with Peculiar jurisdictions have, in many cases, been imperfectly preserved, and a testator, who had his residence within a chapelry, very seldom mentions the chapel in his will, if he could not be interred there." No trace of burials has been found at Lotherton.

At the reopening after repairs, in 1917, Lotherton Chapel was provisionally dedicated in the name of Saint James. But this title had no known historic foundation and was to be without prejudice to any ancient dedication which might be proved (Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn, M.A., late Vicar of Aberford).

As of the chapel itself, so of its ministers, practically nothing can be ascertained. In a deed of the year 1352, reference is made to half an acre of land in the common field of Lutrington at Lutrington Crosse, between the land of Thomas de Ousthorpe and the land of "William Barker, chaplain." Mr. Wm. Brown considers it not unfair to infer that William Barker was chaplain of the chapel at Lotherton.

Mr. Wheater refers to a deed of gift, dated at Lotherton, I May, I362, which was witnessed by "Thomas Ellis, Thomas Mauncell, Chaplains." The latter may have been chaplains of Lotherton; it must, however, be remembered that there were chaplains of the neighbouring chantry of Our Lady in the parish church of Aberford.

³ Hist. of Sherburn and Cawood, 1882 (W. Wheater), 129.

In post-Reformation days we find but slight reference to the Chapel of Lotherton. In the Parliamentary Survey, vol. xviii, pages 230, 263, occurs the following: "At Leeds, 6th June, 1650. There be two chapels in the parish [Sherburn], viz. Lotherton and Micklefield. To the first belongs the town of Lotherton and part of Aberford. It is distant two [sic] miles from the said parish Church, and hath neither minister nor maintenance belonging to it. Micklefield Chapel is also distant about two [sic] miles from its parish Church, and hath neither minister nor maintenance belonging to it, and but about thirty families. We think fit that that part of Aberford in the Chapelry of Lotherton be annexed to the parish of Aberford. We think it not fit to have the said Chapels made parish Churches, there being no considerable number of parishioners to resort thither."

The use of the Lotherton Chapel during the seventeenth century is indicated by the contemporary Prayer Book, pulpit and clerk's desk. In the eighteenth century, in addition to structural alterations (see p. 125; cf. plan), were provided the boards with the Creed and Lord's Prayer; a paten, given in 1720; a bell, cast in 1777; and Prayer Books dated, respectively, 1784 and 1790. The character of the chancel benches and altar rails (removed during the late alterations) affords evidence that the chapel was in use during the earlier part of the nineteenth century.

Lawton (Collections, 1839, p. 76) says Lotherton and Micklefield Chapels "are within the parish of Sherburne, but are not noticed in the Visitation Calls."

Mr. Wheater, writing in 1882, states that the Vicar of Sherburn receives £10 per annum for celebrating divine service in Lotherton Chapel. But Mr. W. Freeborn, who resigned the schoolmastership of Aberford in 1919, says that the last service held in the chapel was on the Sunday after Easter, 1880, when the preacher was the Rev. Wm. Brewerton Broughton, L.Th., curate-in-charge of Micklefield. Mr. T. B. Abbott, of Aberford, believes that the chapel was in regular use on Sunday mornings and afternoons up to the year 1880. Old inhabitants speak of attending the services until that time.

I am informed that both services and payment had ceased before ¹Lawton's Collections, 75. The ancient chapel of Micklefield has disappeared. An illustration of it is given in Mr. Wheater's History of Sherburn and Cawood. Its successor, erected about 1860, became a parish church in 1886.

the vicariate of the Rev. J. N. Earl (Instit. Vicar of Sherburn 1885), but that an annual Harvest Festival was held in Lotherton Chapel during the vicariate of the Rev. James Matthews (1831–1885).¹ But the chapel was disused as a place of worship for some thirty-five years and became neglected and dilapidated.

About the year 1913, Colonel Gascoigne, acting upon the advice of Mr. John Bilson, F.S.A., undertook the work of repairing the old chapel, rescuing it from desecration and judiciously restoring it to use as a House of Prayer.

The outer walls having been cleared of masses of over-hanging foliage, were stripped of their coating of plaster, the stonework grouted and the roof repaired.

Then came the Great War. But "it is an ill wind that blows nobody any good." The fact that Lotherton Hall was used as a V.A.D. Hospital gave occasion, in 1916–17, to the internal repair and refitting of the chapel—primarily for the use of the soldier-patients, who were unable to attend divine service at Aberford Parish Church.²

In the absence of documentary evidence as to the foundation, history, and uses of this chapel, we turn to the old fabric itself and endeavour to learn what its architectural features can reveal to us.

Mr. Bilson has most kindly furnished me with his description of the chapel, written in 1912 (i.e. before the reparation). With Mr. Bilson's consent I have thought it best to quote this in full, and have added footnotes, mainly relating to the recent repairs.

"The chapel consists of a nave about 31 feet long by 15 feet 4 inches wide, and a chancel 14 feet 9 inches long by 12 feet 6 inches wide, measured within the walls.3

"It dates from the last quarter of the twelfth century and the whole of the main structure (except the west wall of the nave) belongs to this period, though some of the openings have been altered in later times. Two of the twelfth century windows remain in their original condition, one on the north side of the chancel and the other in the middle of the south side of the nave; both are very narrow openings, splayed on the inside, with lintels on the outside cut to semi-circular arched form. The window on the south side of the nave has radiating lines incised on the outside of its lintel to simulate joints, a feature which is sometimes found in earlier work, but (so far as my observation goes) is decidedly uncommon at this date.¹ The east window of the chancel is also of the original twelfth century date, but it has been widened later by cutting away the external jambs, thus giving it a shouldered form on the outside.

² The repaired chapel was reopened on 28 June, 1917, by the Archbishop of York (Dr. Lang).

"The doorway in the western part of the north wall of the nave seems to have been originally the only entrance to the chapel, and is its most characteristic feature. It is a part of the original late twelfth century work, and is an admirable example of its period. The recessed external jambs have had a single shaft on each side, now missing, though the capitals remain, with the simple flat-leafed volute form which is so characteristic of this period; the abaci are simply hollow chamfered, and are returned as impost mouldings to the inner jambs. The arch is semi-circular, of two well-moulded orders, each with a roll between two hollows, the roll on the outer order being pointed or keel-shaped, and that on the inner order having a sunk channel along the middle of the roll (another feature characteristic of this period). The arch is finished externally with a simple chamfered hood-moulding.²

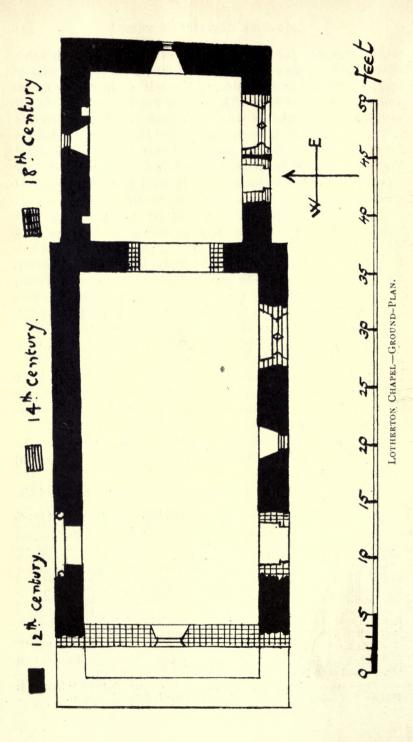

"The gabled bell-cote on the west gable of the nave seems to be an addition of the late thirteenth (or possibly early fourteenth) century date.³

"The openings, other than those described above as part of the thwaite, F.S.A., in The Archæological Journal, liii). The Deerhurst Chapel, brought to light in 1885, has a nave 25 feet 6 inches in length, by 15 feet 10 inches in breadth, and a chancel 14 feet by 11 feet 3 inches entered by a roundheaded arch 6 feet 6 inches in width and 10 feet in height (Tewhesbury and Deerhurst, H. J. L. J. Massé, M.A., Ed. 1901). The eleventh century church of Over Denton (Cumberland) has a chancel 11 feet 10 inches long by 11 feet 2 inches wide; its nave is 27 feet long by 16 feet wide (Transactions Cumberland and Westmorland Antiquarian and Archæological Society, xv, New Series, 187). The mediæval chapels in the vicinity of Lotherton, but of later date, e.g., Huddleston, Lead, Ledston, and Steeton have no chancels, but their plans resemble that of the nave of Lotherton and their internal dimensions (30 feet by 15 feet) are about the same (see Yorks. Archæol. Journal, xxi, 201–213).

- ² Before the recent repairs this doorway was walled up, and a two-light window had been inserted in the walling.

³ There is provision for two bells, but only one remains and is inscribed; DALTON YORK FECIT 1777 (Yorks. Archæol. Journal, xvii, 2).

original structure, have been altered in later times. The window on the south side of the chancel, of two lights, with chamfered jambs, mullion and lintel, is an insertion, in order to give more light to the altar, probably of the fourteenth century. So also is the two-light window in the eastern part of the south wall of the nave, the mullion of which is now missing.¹

"The west window of the nave and the wall in which it is set seem to be of post-Reformation date,² as also is the doorway now in use, in the western part of the south wall of the nave.

"The square opening³ between the nave and chancel, which replaces the original chancel arch, results from the rebuilding of the wall in which it occurs. [This wall was, in 1913, found to be a complete rebuild, without any bond to the side walls.]

"The roofs have principal trusses with tie beams, and are covered with stone slates, without any ceiling boards.4

"The chapel retains some of its fittings, which are of various dates. Against the inside of the west wall of the nave is a short stone shaft with base and scalloped capital, the top of which is hollowed out as a basin; this is of the original late twelfth century period, and is either a holy-water stoup or (more probably) a pillar piscina. The octagonal pulpit, with its sounding-board and clerk's desk, are of the seventeenth century. Some parts of old benches remain in the nave, of the simplest construction, with plank seats tenoned into plain ends. The chancel benches and altar rails are nineteenth century 'Churchwarden Gothic.'6

"In the nave are boards with the Commandments painted in black letter (? seventeenth century), and a hatchment over the opening to the chancel. At the east end of the chancel are two eighteenth century boards, with the Lord's Prayer and Creed.⁷

"The foregoing description was written before the repair of the chapel in 1913. In the course of this repair, considerable traces of

- ³ The chancel arch of Deerhurst Chapel is about the same width (6 feet 6 inches) as the Lotherton square opening, which Mr. Kitson considers to be an eighteenth century alteration. The removal of the plaster failed to reveal definite traces of an arch.
- ⁴ This old roof has been repaired where necessary and ceiling boards have been provided.
 - ⁵ These were carefully repaired and retained.
 - ⁶ All the benches have been removed; the altar rails, too, have disappeared.
- ⁷ Some, at any rate, of these boards have been preserved, but the hatchment is indecipherable.

mediæval painting were found on the walls of the chapel, including a band of shields above the east window, and king's heads in a lozengy pattern below this window. It was found that the west wall of the nave had been rebuilt in post-Reformation times, and that the nave had then been shortened; on the north wall, the internal plastering remained westward of the internal angle; and part of the foundation of the original west wall was found, its west face being 4 feet to inches west of the outer face of the later (present) west wall. The bell-cote must have been rebuilt with the west wall."

Thus far Mr. Bilson.

The removal of the plaster from the walls revealed, in the south wall of the chancel, a blocked square-headed priests' doorway, which Mr. Kitson notes as a fourteenth century insertion. There are four recesses, each about one foot square, two in the north and one in the south wall of the chancel, and a fourth in the south wall of the nave, just behind the pulpit. If they are not aumbries it is not easy to account for these.¹

The massive oak chest which since the restoration of the chapel has served as an altar, is an old German one and bears Biblical carvings and texts in German. It was purchased by Colonel Gascoigne, several years ago, at Cuxhaven.

The chapel retains no ancient glass.

At the west end of the north wall of the nave is a metal tablet inscribed as follows: "In memory of Thomas Hugo Trench, 2nd Lieut. R.F.C., accidentally killed while flying over Ringhay Wood, January 13th, 1917. His body rested in this chapel until taken for burial in Essex."

The Communion Vessels belonging to this chapel are of silver and consist of Cup with cover and Paten. "The cup is plain with a bell-shaped bowl, and has a plain stem and foot. Under the foot is rudely incised, 'Dicatû Anno Salutis 1628.' Height 5½, dia. of bowl 3, of foot 2¾, depth of bowl 3⅓ inches. The cover is plain; dia. 3½, of button 1¼, height 1¾ inches. Both cup and cover have the same hall-marks, viz., (I) leopard and lys; (2) Cap. Old Eng. W; (3) R.H., pellet below in shaped shield (York, 1628, Robert Harrington, free 1616, d. 1647)."

"The paten is a plate on a central circular stem. It is engraved with a shield of arms, viz., Between 3 cocks' heads erased a fesse charged with a mitre. Surrounding the shield is the inscription, in Rom. capitals: DONUM E.S. AD CAPELLAM LOTHERTON MDCCXX. Dia. 6\frac{5}{8}, of foot 2\frac{5}{8}, height 1\frac{3}{8} inches. Hall-marks, (I) Lo; (2) Li. hd. er.; (3) Brit.; (4) Cap. Rom. D. (London, 1719, Seth Lofthouse)" (York-shire Church Plate, ii, Yorks. Archæol. Soc., Extra Series, iv, 164).

The arms mentioned were borne by John Alcock, Bishop of Rochester, 1472; of Worcester, 1476; and of Ely, 1486–1500. John Alcock was a Yorkshireman, the son of William and Joan Alcock. He was probably born about 1428, in Hull, where he founded a chantry (c. 1480), the priest of which was "bound to kepe a free scole of grammer within the saide towne of Hull."

Bishop Alcock was the founder, in 1497, of Jesus College, Cambridge. The Bishop rose to high preferment in Church and State. But I have been unable to trace any further connection he may have had with Yorkshire; nor is it easy to say why his coat of arms should appear on the eighteenth century paten of Lotherton Chapel, The initials E.S., inscribed on the paten, are apparently those of Miss Elizabeth Shillito, of Kirkthorpe, in the parish of Warmfield, formerly of York. She was the daughter of George Shillito, of Aberford, and a considerable landowner in the townships of Aberford and Lotherton. Her will was proved at York, 12 October, 1728.

It is interesting to find that the family of Shillito, of Heath, in Warmfield parish, near Wakefield, bore arms: argent on a fesse between three cocks' heads erased sable, erected, beaked and jalloped or, a mitre of the third (Notes and Queries, lls. ix, Mar. 14, 1914). Similar arms are associated with persons named Shillito (Shilleto) on an early nineteenth century grave-slab in Kirkby Wharfe Church, near Tadcaster; also in Burke's Armoury, 1844.

If, as would appear to be the case, the Alcock arms had been adopted by the Shillito family, we have a clue to the reason of their appearance on the paten given to Lotherton Chapel by "E.S.," in 1720. Lotherton was at this period owned by George Rhodes. Esq., Bachelor of Laws.

Seth Lofthouse, maker of the Lotherton paten, in 1719, was probably a member of a local family whose name repeatedly occurs in the registers of Barwick-in-Elmet and Whitkirk parishes. He was apparently the son of Alverah Lofthouse, of Manston, gentleman [Will proved at York, 21 January, 1727-8], and grandson of Seth Lofthouse, of Manston, yeoman, who was buried at Whitkirk, 31 August, 1674, and whose will was proved at York, 21 Sept., 1674. "Seth, son of Avara Lofthouse," appears to have been born 30 Dec., 1658, and baptised on the following day at Whitkirk. He entered Goldsmiths' Hall, London, in 1697, and he occurs as a maker of Yorkshire Church Plate, 1697–1719.

There is an old copy of the Book of Common Prayer, bound in leather and stamped "Lotherton Chapel." It dates from the reign of Charles II—probably 1670. There are also two Georgian Prayer Books dated 1784 and 1790 respectively.

I am indebted to the kindness of many who have contributed to the interest of this paper: To Colonel and Mrs. Gascoigne, for the facilities they so readily granted for the inspection of the Chapel and for information regarding it; to Mr. John Bilson, F.S.A., for permission to print his architectural description; to Mr. Sydney D. Kitson, F.S.A., to whom I owe the ground-plan here reproduced, and also certain notes; to Mr. Wm. Brown, Litt.D., F.S.A., who read the MS., for literary assistance; to Mr. F. V. Gill, of Bradford, a member of the Society, for permission to reproduce his photographs; to Mr. G. D. Lumb, F.S.A., for much help and advice on the whole undertaking; to Mr. W. B. Barwell Turner, of Leeds, for assistance in genealogy and heraldry; also to Mrs. Ellis, of Wales Vicarage, Sheffield; the Rev. R. G. Glennie, M.A., formerly Vicar of Sherburn-in-Elmet; the Rev. B. W. Shepheard-Walwyn, M.A., late Vicar of Aberford; Mr. W. Freeborn, late Schoolmaster of Aberford; and Messrs. T. B. Abbott, L.S.A., and T. H. Prater, of Aberford, for replies to queries.

The Manor Court of Leeds Kirkgatecum-Holbeck.

BY THE LATE W. T. LANCASTER, F.S.A.

The following extracts are taken from a MS. in the possession of Mr. Montague Spencer-Stanhope of Cannon Hall, by whose kind permission they are printed by the Thoresby Society. As the Society has never been able to gain access to the original Leeds Court Rolls, it is hoped that these extracts will not be without interest.

The MS. consists of a number of foolscap sheets of paper roughly bound together in a vellum cover. They relate to Courts held between May, 1666, and February 1671-2; but the records of the various Courts are not always in regular order, and some are wanting. They are written in many different hands. On the whole it appears likely that these sheets are the rough notes taken down during or immediately after the sitting of the Court, possibly to be afterwards engrossed on the formal rolls.

THE MANOR OF LEEDS, KIRKEGATE CUM HOLBECKE.

View of Frankpledge and Court Leet of the Lord King, with Court Baron of the most noble Henry, Viscount Irwyn, held for the said Manor at Leeds Kirkegate aforesaid, the 5th day of May in the 18th year of our lord Charles the 2nd, by the grace of God King, etc., and in the year of the Lord 1666, before John Stanhope, esquire, steward of the Court there.

A Leeds Malefactor of 1752.

By MISS EMILY HARGRAVE.

A thrilling story of how the Devil visited Leeds in the middle of the eighteenth century is a reminder that some of the extraordinary outrages of 1921 in Ireland and elsewhere are not quite the unprecedented occurrences that some of us may have thought.

Much depends upon the form in which an event is recorded. If so literally diabolical a happening as that at which we are going to glance occurred to-day, the newspapers, after their kinds, would have been full of descriptions, and interviews, and illustrations, and surmises of the most sensational character.

A much more sober account suggestive of Defoe in its restraint and in its simplicity, is to be found in a relation of the facts figuring in a book of odds and ends collected by the late Mr. Griffith Wright, under the title, "Matters of Interest to the Town of Leeds." The volume is in the Leeds Reference Library, and includes printed pamphlets and manuscripts relating to local affairs. The particular narrative we shall deal with is said by Mr. Wright to have been "Copied from a MS. in the handwriting of Mr. T. Wilson."

Its interest lies in the vivid glimpse it gives of the life lived by our Leeds forefathers in the eighteenth century, and its mention of the "Leeds Worthies" who appear as dramatis personæ. The style and title is somewhat startling. It is introduced as "A narrative of an incarnate Devilish Robbery committed in the house of Mr. William Fearn¹, of Leeds, clothworker, on Friday night, August 14th, 1752, betwixt one and two in the morning, by a person in masquerade representing the Devil, whom Mr. Fearn dismantled of his mask and horns, also of a desperate instrument of cruelty, which the sham Devil mislaid, with a wire to support his horns in a frightful posture, and a steel to strike fire, all which are preserved by Mr. Fearn as Trophies of his brave and heroic victory."

¹ The Fearns were ancient owners of property on the Bank and Quarry Hill, also the Nether Mills. There were several families and the name is spelt Fern and Fearne in the Registers of the Leeds Parish Church. Mr. Wm. Fearn, who gives this graphic account of the robbery, was a widower, his sister keeping house for him. His wife Frances had died in 1728, and his only daughter (Catherine) in 1730, leaving him with one son (Henry, born Oct. 3, 1724).

We are well aware that then or now an occurrence of this kind would cause considerable excitement in the neighbourhood, and would be widely discussed and certainly exaggerated, and we are prepared for the next paragraph which informs us that—

"The account of this robbery having been much misrepresented the following narrative was written as he delivered it from his own mouth."

This is evidence of authenticity of the most satisfactory kind, so we will let Mr. Fearn tell his story in his own quaint way, merely interspersing notes when a little explanation seems necessary.

On Thursday, August 13th, 1752, I received a certain sum of money from a certain gentleman of this town, and came home betwixt 5 and 6 o'clock in the evening, and found my servants and Mr. James Cookson's¹ servants in my working chamber, where they had been shearing a piece of cloth, getting their drinkings, leaving the piece of cloth on the shearing board, and went about their business.

In the dusk of the evening the person that committed the robbery entered the shop door very privated [sic] (it being locked before it was dark), and went up into the working chamber and laid himself down upon the cloth.

At 6 o'clock, as usual, I ordered a tankard of ale and my tobacco box to be brought up into my lodging room, and went to bed betwixt nine and ten, leaving the tankard, tobacco box and candle in the candle-stick upon the table, and the door of my room was shut.

On the next morning, August 14th, betwixt one and two o'clock the sham Devil came into my room and took the candle and candle-stick into the working chamber, as is thought (as it appeared by some tinder and some small bits of tallow found there scattered by my servants), strike (and struck) fire with a steel and a flint which he had prepared to light a candle, which done he returned to my lodging room where I was asleep, and minding his opportunity he took my gold watch (which had the maker's name inside, viz. Ward, London) which usually hung upon the chimney piece over my motto—

¹ Mr. James Cookson, born 1723, was the son of Timothy Cookson, and was nephew of William Cookson and grandson of William Cookson (who settled in Leeds about 1652). James Cookson married, in May, 1749, Mrs. Mary Lowry (see Cookson Pedigree, Thoresby's Ducatus, 2nd ed., 136).

'Be good, and do good. What is it to serve God and suffer evil?'

Then he took my black shag¹ breeches from the bedside, out of the chamber into the stairs, and took out a sum of money in silver and gold, which was partly Portugal² pieces, leaving the breeches upon the stairs where the Rev. Mr. Cookson³ found them soon after, and a Portobello piece which the villain left on the stairs.

I, not knowing what had happened, awaked with my eyes perfectly opened, and saw my curtains partly drawn, my chamber door open, and a light shining into my room from the stairs.

I cried out 'Lord, what is the matter,' casting my eyes that instant to the closet door which is opposite to my chamber door, I saw as I thought the appearance of the devil, in black with a pair of horns fourteen inches long upon his head, black and knotted, also a mask over his face.

Upon the sight of this terrible object, though at the time I had the gout upon me, I immediately jumped out of bed.

I seized the masquerade Devil as he was opening my closet door, by grasping my right arm about his neck and really found the sham Devil only to be a man! to my great surprise—whereupon like a fierce lion against his antagonist I pressed his head to my breast and his hands being loose he struck me violently with a stone, as I thought he had in his hands—then taking more courage I hauled him over the floor from my closet door towards the window, finding I was stronger than he, that he seemed as a child in my arms and almost as tame as a lamb.

But I being mindful of the old saying, 'after a calm cometh a storm,' I began to suspect he had some instrument of cruelty about him and wanted a proper opportunity to exert his diabolical fury from which I might expect nothing but immediate death, I opened my casement with my left hand and cried out 'Rogues, thieves, he is safe, he is safe.'

² The Portuguese moidore, value £1 7s., was current in England during the eighteenth century, the English coinage being much debased. The following is an extract from the Leeds Mercury, March 16, 1773: "At a meeting of merchants and tradesmen held in the Talbot Inn in this town, it was agreed to take all kinds of Portugal Gold which shall appear good and of sufficient weight." The writer is acquainted with a member of a very old-established business firm in Leeds possessing a pair of small scales used expressly for weighing "Portugal Gold." No doubt many readers will remember an account of an eighteenth century robbery in one of the "Ingoldsby Legends" (The Hand of Glory), where the robbers are apprehended at an inn: "And fair rose nobles and bright moidores the waiter pulls out of their pockets by scores."

The fellow before I awakened, when he took my watch or breeches, laid down upon the table a large iron beef skewer with a large pummel¹ of lead, which I presume very providentially in our scuffle rolled off the table and stuck fast between it and the wall, so the villain was happily disappointed and lost it.

Whereupon he took up my leaden tobacco box and therewith began to strike me in the forehead and other parts of my head, breast and arms, which cut and bruised me grievously that I cried out again, 'Murder, murder, rogues, thieves, he is safe, he is safe.'

The villain still beating me and wounding me in several places, yet I still held him fast in my arms, being chill with my shirt only on me and barefoot, I flang him upon the bed and still held him there, and he having bruised the box that it was of little use to him, he threw it away while we were upon the bed, then he grappled with his hands and struggled with all his might to get himself from me but could not.

My sister and housekeeper (aged 65 years) being in bed below and hearing the noise above came upstairs and found the candle where the sham Devil had set it and found both upon the bed, and altho' I had lost much blood I still held the villain fast in my arms and dismantled him of his horns, mask, etc., which horns were fixed upon his head with a piece of wire to keep them steady and at a due distance, and the mask being black silk was gathered and tied under his chin.

Then I desired my sister to look at his face, upon that the villain sprung out one of his feet and dashed the candle out of her hand, but I myself saw that a small part of his face was white, the rest daubed with soot, and his head seemed to have been shaved about a month ago, and that his temples were nearly shaved, and she went downstairs to light the candle and left us upon the bed, when the villain struggled hard to quit himself from me, so that we both got accidentally on our feet upon the floor, and he trod and stamped upon my fore-feet and crushed them grievously which was prodigious pain to me, but notwithstanding he could not get loose.

² Temples newly shaved not nearly. This is an obvious slip in handwriting by somebody. The meaning is that the temples showed perfectly "clean," proving that they had been shaved recently, in accordance with the wigwearing customs of the time.

At last the dismantled sham incarnate Devil pushed me against my large easy chair which I usually sit in, that we both fell on the floor, I still bleeding very much when I felt by the moisture and chilliness of my shirt, which clung to me in tatters like a wet and cold dishclout.

After a little struggle I felt myself grow feeble, and let the villain go—and it being dark he could not find any sort of weapon to exert any further his diabolical rage against me, he made the best means he could to get to the casement; and leaped out of it, about five yards high from the ground, into St. Peter's Churchyard.

I, getting up almost as soon as him, and looking out of the casement, saw him pass on the left-hand side of Benjamin Livesey's house into the Calls. I observed he was young and slender and of low stature.

Mrs. Deborah Stevenson and Mrs. Mabel Thompson, both of them the Rev. Mr. Cookson's servants, saw him descend from a casement, and when he alighted they observed that he made a stop and shaked himself, as if he was stunned by his fall, and presently he went to the left hand and turned into the Calls.

Miss Jenny Marsden, sister to Mrs. Cookson, also saw him go that way. Henry Marsden, Esqr., brother-in-law to Mr. Cookson, being then at Mr. Cookson's house (which joins in an angle to my house), and being awaked by the noise of hearing me cry 'Murder,' etc., and wondering from whence it proceeded, he immediately called out, 'Esquire, what is the matter?' I answered, 'Sir, I am robbed and almost murdered.' Upon that I went to bed all over bloody as if bathed in gore, and there I was about three minutes before any person came to me.

My sister at last brought a light, and immediately after came Mr. Cookson's servants and were terribly affrighted on seeing me in such a bleeding condition. Soon after came Mr. Marsden, and when he saw me he was so astonished he could not stay in the room.

Then came Mr. Cookson without his stockings, and on his first sight of me he said my throat was cut, but having courage he searched with his fingers and found my throat and neck whole. He made the most haste he could with Mr. Marsden, went to Alderman Kennion's,¹ called upon him, awoke him and told him 'The Esquire' was robbed and almost murdered.

Mr. James Kennion¹ was called and came almost immediately and searched my wounds, whereof some were on my head; and most of the upper parts of my body, arms and feet were miserably battered and crushed.

When Alderman Kennion came he sent for the constable, granted a search warrant and ordered an advertisement to be published in the Leeds Mercury.

In the morning crowds of people came to see the horns, mask, iron skewer, etc., which the sham Devil left behind him, so Mrs. Cookson sent all the things to the next publichouse, and locked up my house doors that I might not be disturbed with the tumultuous noise.

Mr. James Kennion, chyrurgeon, attended me all that day, by whose indefatigable care and skill, with the help of God, I happily recovered in a fortnight's time.

On Sunday se'nnight after I went to church to return thanks to Almighty God for mercies received and dangers escaped: and to my great comfort the account of the *Good Samaritan*² was the Gospel of the day.

A stranger clergyman preached from the following text: 'Be not ignorant of Satan's devices.'

It would be interesting to know if the perpetrator of this singular robbery was ever discovered.

The "sham Devil," whoever he was, was probably aware that had he been caught he would have been in serious peril of the law on more points than one.

In the early Georgian era many new capital offences were created, and presumably in 1752 the Statute 9 Geo. I, c. 22 (1722), known as the "Black Act," was still in force. It made going about at night with "black faces" and in disguise a hanging matter. The enactment was aimed primarily at highwaymen and was also meant to stop the robbing of warrens and fishponds, cutting down plantations, killing deer, etc.

¹ James Kennion, surgeon, the son of Alderman Kennion, was born Aug. 17, 1728. He married, at Headingley, May 25, 1752, Elizabeth Cookson, sister to the Rev. Edward Cookson. She died in 1753, and he afterwards married Elizabeth, daughter of —— Parkinson, Esq., of Hatfield (see Pedigree, Thoresby's Ducatus, 257). He was an Alderman and Mayor of Leeds in 1766. Died March 21, 1808. Two of his grandsons, officers in the Life Guards, were present at the battle of Waterloo.

² 13th Sunday after Trinity.

It was this act which drew from Sir James Mackintosh the sarcastic observation that "if a gentleman is going to a masquerade and is obliged to pass along a highway, he is liable, if detected, to be hanged."

But Mr. Fearn's assailant managed to gain a considerable start, and it seems to have been an easy matter for criminals in those days, if so minded, to become permanently "missing."

Mr. Wm. Fearn seems to have been rather unfortunate in the matter of robberies, as the Leeds Intelligencer of Thursday, Jan. 20th, 1756, contains the following advertisement:

"Stol'n.

From Mr. William Fearne, in the Church yard, Six large Silver Spoons, mark'd W.F. Four large Silver Spoons, H.F., one large Silver Spoon, K.F., and another Silver Spoon, A.B.C. Six Tea Spoons and two Silver Salts, the marks uncertain, and a small Silver-hafted Knife and Fork.

The robbery is supposed to be committed by a Boy in a green Waistcoat and Breeches and blue Stockings.

If any of the Plate is offer'd to be pawn'd or sold please to stop the Person and acquaint Mr. Fearne who will give a proper Reward."

The Churchyard and Kirkgate, the locality where Mr. Fearn lived, would be a comparatively rural spot in those days, judging from an extract made from the "Deaths" in the Leeds Mercury of Jan. 12th, 1833:

"On Tuesday last in Butterworth's yard, Kirkgate, in this town, where she had resided for upwards of 60 years, Elizabeth Wilkinson, aged 93. This ancient female retained the use of all her faculties till within a short time of her death. She has been often heard to tell of seeing a hedge growing on one side of Marsh Lane, and at the time she went to live in the Yard in which she died the fields came close up to it, though there is scarce one now within half a mile."

Mr. Wm. Fearn died in January, 1766, from gout, and the following is a copy of the will:

"In the name of God Amen. I, William Fearn of Leeds, Cloth dresser, being very weak in body, but of sound and perfect mind and memory, blessed be Almighty God for the same, I give to my beloved son, Henry Fearn, all my real and personal estates and I appoint him sole executor. Dated 21 Oct., 1765. Wm. Fearn. Witnesses, George MacAndrew, Richd. Watkinson, Samuell Chappell. Pass'd Seal 18 Feb., 1766."

Potes on the Importation of English Wool into Ireland as Affected by the Union.

BY CHARLES TRAVIS CLAY, F.S.A.

On March 26th, 1800, it was resolved by the two Houses of the Parliament of Ireland that, "in order to promote and secure the essential Interests of Great Britain and Ireland, and to consolidate the Strength, Power and Resources of the British Empire, it will be advisable to concur in such Measures as may best tend to unite the Two Kingdoms of Great Britain and Ireland into One Kingdom, in such Manner, and on such Terms and Conditions, as may be established by the Acts of the respective Parliaments of Great Britain and Ireland." It would be fit to propose, as the Sixth Article of Union, so the resolution proceeded, that, "from the First Day of January, 1801, all Prohibitions and Bounties on the Export of Articles the Growth, Produce, or Manufacture of either Country to the other, shall cease and determine, and that the said Articles shall thenceforth be exported from one Country to the other without Duty or Bounty on such Export: that all Articles the Growth, Produce, or Manufacture of either Kingdom" (save certain enumerated Articles) "shall from henceforth be imported into each Country from the other free from Duty"....." and that the Woollen Manufactures shall pay on Importation into each Country, the Duties now payable on Importation into Ireland

At that time there existed a prohibition against the export of home-grown wool from England¹; and the result of these proposals would be to modify this prohibition in favour of Ireland.

II.

On April 28th, 1800, there was read in the British House of Lords a "Petition of the Merchants, Factors, Warehousemen, and others, concerned in the Wool and Woollen Trade, residing in London, and of Manufacturers deputed from Districts where Wool is wrought up; setting forth, 'That the Petitioners observe with inexpressible Concern, that in the projected Arrangement of the Union with the Sister Kingdom, she proposes that the existing Laws prohibiting the Exportation of British Wool should be repealed so far as relates to herself, whilst on her Part she claims the Continuance of protecting Duties for her Woollen Manufactures; that the Petitioners humbly conceive and believe, that the Growth of Wool in Great Britain is not sufficient to supply the Manufactures thereof with a Quantity equal to the present Demand for Home Consumption and Foreign Markets, so that if any Part is suffered to be taken away, the Petitioners and the Manufacturers must experience very great Injury; that the Petitioners are most seriously alarmed in case British Wool should be permitted to be exported; that under Pretence of carrying it to Ireland, great Quantities would be conveyed to Foreign Countries, without the Possibility of Prevention (especially in Times of Peace), and that the Facility with which it might be passed from various parts of Ireland, free from Detection, furnishing strong Apprehensions that still larger Quantities would find their Way into Foreign Countries, whereby the British Merchant and Manufacturer would suffer, and the Enemies and Rivals of the United Kingdom be furnished with means of supplanting both the Petitioners and the new Members of the Empire in Foreign Markets'; and therefore praying, 'That no Alteration may be made in the existing Laws, so far as they prohibit the Exportation of Wool, and that the Petitioners may be heard by their Counsel at the Bar of this House."

It was ordered "That the said Petition be referred to the Committee of the whole House, appointed to consider the Address and Resolutions of the Two Houses of the Irish Parliament and that the Petitioners be at Liberty to be heard by their Counsel, as desired."

On May 1st, 1800, the Petitioners were heard by the Committee, and the following gave evidence²:

Mr. William Hustler (Bradford), Mr. Christopher Rawdon (near Halifax), Mr. Thomas Lumb (Wakefield), Mr. John Ratcliffe (Saddleworth), Mr. William Fisher (Leeds), Mr. John Willis (Stroud), Mr.

Jeremiah Naylor (Wakefield), Mr. Benjamin Gott (Leeds), Mr. Jonas Nottage (Bocking, Essex), Mr. James Masterman (Lavenham, Suffolk), Mr. William Jenkins (Shepton Mallet, Somerset), Mr. Nathaniel Wathen (Stroud), Mr. Robert Mears (Frome).

Mr. William Hustler stated that he lived at Bradford, his business being that of a wool stapler. He had been engaged in that business for about sixteen years; and his father was engaged in the same business for about sixty years. He was also engaged in the coal trade at Liverpool.

He calculated that the quantity of wool grown in England ("in this Kingdom") had not materially altered since 1782, when it was estimated at 600,000 packs, of 240 lbs. each.1 In certain cases the supply had diminished as a result of enclosures and of the introduction of a new breed of sheep. An increase in the fertility of the soil had the effect of rendering wool heavier and of less value. He estimated the average value of a pack of wool to be fir ros.; in 1779 the price had been about f.5. The supply, he considered, was insufficient; and he could not remember any difficulty in buying the quantity required before 1700 and 1800, except at the end of 1792, when the wool of the country was bought up on speculation by wool staplers and country bankers. With regard to proposals for an increase of quantity, it was certain that by encouraging a larger breed of sheep the quality would be deteriorated. His estimate was that on an average the value of wool was trebled by its manufacture. His father had calculated that in 1782 the number of people employed in this manufacture and dependent upon it was 3,000,000; since that date the number had been lessened by the introduction of machinery. He was not an importer of foreign wool.

On the question of freights, the carriage of a pack of wool from Exeter to Leeds via London was 29s. 3d. if sent by land from London to Leeds, and 21s. 3d. if sent by sea from London to Leeds; the finer sorts of wool were usually sent by land from London. To Ireland the freight of conveying a pack of wool from Exeter would probably amount to 4s. only. If, therefore, the prohibition to export wool to Ireland were removed, Ireland would be supplied with wool from the south and western coasts of England at a far cheaper rate than the Yorkshire manufacturers; and he was of opinion that a large quantity of wool would immediately be bought in the English markets for the use of the Irish manufacturers, the consequence of which must be that British manufacturers would be deprived of employment.

Mr. William Fisher stated that he was a merchant at Leeds, having dealt in cloth and coatings for twenty-eight years. He had recently had difficulty in procuring short wool from Northumberland, the borders of Scotland, and London; and during the last two months had been obliged to return one-half of the orders that he had received from the Continent of Europe.

The other petitioners gave similar evidence as to the shortage of supply in the raw material: Mr. Christopher Rawdon mentioned the scarcity that obtained at the Wakefield, Halifax, and Keighley markets; and his works had been closed for a week on that account; in Lincolnshire his agent could scarcely find a parcel of wool in a ride of forty miles. Mr. Thomas Lumb, a wool stapler at Wakefield, confirmed the opinion that the introduction of turnips for food and of artificial grasses tended to enlarge the growth of the wool, the length of it, and to lower the quality for manufacturing purposes. With regard to Ireland, Mr. Benjamin Gott, of Leeds, had special knowledge. He considered that if English wool could be exported to Ireland free of duty, whilst, on the other hand the protecting duties in Ireland in respect of manufactured woollen goods continued, English manufacturers must either follow the raw material or must be a "burthen to the parish" in which they live.

The proceedings in the House of Commons had been of a similar character. On April 28th, 1800, "a considerable number of petitions were presented by Mr. Wilberforce, Mr. Lascelles, and other Members, against the resolution which went to permit the exportation of British wool. The petitions were referred to the committee on the King's Message respecting an union with Ireland. The House having resolved itself into the said committee, Mr. Law was heard at the bar in behalf of the petitioners, and a number of witnesses were examined." On April 29th "further witnesses were examined; after which Mr. Plumer summed up the evidence in behalf of the petitioners."

¹ Before the House of Commons Committee he was described as a merchant twenty-eight years and manufacturer ten years.

III.

On May 1st Mr. Pitt stated in the House of Commons that "he had listened with attention to the evidence brought forward by the petitioners, but had not been convinced that the exportation of wool to Ireland would so far endanger the woollen manufactures of this country, as to interfere with the general policy of the measure"; and he proposed that the sixth resolution of the two Irish Houses be agreed to. The case for the petitioners was taken up by Mr. Wilberforce. He grounded "the propriety of preventing the exportation of British wool to Ireland entirely on the position, that the quantity we grow is inadequate to the consumption of our own manufacturers." He pointed out that "in several particulars the natural advantages of Ireland for carrying on the woollen manufacture might be shown to be greater than those of Great Britain, particularly in the article of water, and of easy internal communication by navigable rivers"; and "it was not possible to forget the prodigious difference, not only in wages of labour, price of provisions, and habits of life, but in taxes and other burthens of a similar nature." He considered that the importation of wool into Ireland was unnecessary in a measure which contained so many instances of a modification of the principle of complete union; and pointed out that it made no part of the commercial propositions of 1785. Moreover there was no reason to annul the compact, dating back to the days of William III, under which the Irish woollen manufactures were discouraged and the Irish linen manufactures were encouraged. His speech ended with a description of "the prosperity, the domestic comfort, the industry, the spirit of independence and of rational liberty, which the woollen manufactures had diffused over a country naturally barren and thinly peopled"; and he trusted that there would not be incurred "the

Their evidence was curiously similar to that given before the House of Lords' Committee. But the following additional points are of interest. Mr. Hustler gave a statement of the number of broadcloths milled in the West Riding for each year between 1726 and 1799, and of narrow cloths for each year between 1726 and 1799, and of narrow cloths for each year between 1738 and 1799. In 1799 the totals were 8,806,688 yards broads and 6,377,277 yards narrows. He considered that the annual value of the English woollen manufacture was £19,800,000. This figure was substantially confirmed by Mr. Christopher Rawdon, who estimated the amount of vested capital involved as £6,500,000; and the quantity of woollen manufactures exported as being four-ninths of the total. Mr. Hustler stated that combing wool appeared to be one half of the growth of the wool of the kingdom.

He referred to "the numerous and respectable body of men engaged in the woollen manufacture of this Kingdom"; and, in particular, to Mr. Hustler as "a wool-stapler of superior intelligence and extensive dealings." For the quotations from his speech, see Parl. History.

smallest risk of endangering the continuance of this happy scene, and of drying up or diverting the stream which has proved to this extensive district the source of so many blessings." But these words were spoken when the woollen manufactures were still in their domestic stage, before the complete development of the factory system; and it was the latter, and not the articles of Union with Ireland, that changed the happy scene which Mr. Wilberforce described. Meanwhile, his plea was answered by Mr. Pitt, who had not the least reason to apprehend the results that the petitioners had foreshadowed; and the resolution was agreed to by a large majority.

IV.

It is probable that this result was a foregone conclusion. In the British Parliament the opposition to the Irish resolutions was never of a formidable character; and Mr. Lecky states that "the only serious danger to be encountered in England was from the jealousy of the commercial classes, and their opposition appears to have been almost exclusively directed against the clause which permitted the importation of English wool into Ireland."1 This clause was as important a one as any in the eyes of the promoters of the Union. "We are most impatiently looking," wrote Lord Cornwallis on May 2nd, "to the decision of the British Parliament on the woollen business, on the event of which I think the success of our great measure entirely depends. By our last express I understand Mr. Pitt had said that he thought the petitioners had made out no case."2 And on April 22nd he had written to a correspondent in England, "If you make no alteration about the wool, there can be no doubt of success."3 It is therefore unlikely that Pitt would have been ready to consider an amendment calculated to endanger the Union.

Nor, in the light of actual results, were the fears of the petitioners justified. An increase took place in the importation of foreign wool⁴; and the report of the Committee of the House of Commons on the Woollen Manufacture in England in 1806 indicated a satisfactory state of prosperity.

^{4&}quot; The average importation of six years, ending with 1807, was 8,262,733 lbs., and the average of the next eight years, ending with 1815, was 8,886,853 lbs., including in the last two years not less than 1½ million of lbs. of native wool, imported from Ireland" (A letter to the Right Hon. Lord Erskine by Philopatria (John Clay, of Rastrick), 1818, p. 13).

Potes on Leeds Chapels.

[In a MS. Book formerly belonging to Wm. Cookson, 1 Mayor of Leeds.]

Taken out of Mr. Brian Dixon's Papers. Upon the consideration [? consecration] of Hunslet Chappell Anno 1636 called S^t Maries: endowed with f_{13} ros. p annum forth of severall mens lands in Hunslet as by the said consideration [? consecration] deed will appear.

Mr. Robert Brook hath in his hands a silver tankerd worth about 3 or 4 pounds which was given by Alderman Brook of Hunslet to be used at the Celebration of the Lords supper at Hunslet Chappell & when the Communion is lay'd a side at the said Chappell then the said piece of plate to go for the use of the poor of Hunslet.

[INQUISITION.] Mr. Tho. Coats of Beeston, gent., gave a parcell of Land called Coates farm to the vallue of twenty pounds p. Ann: to the Minister of Beeston-Chappell successively for ever. Also the jury found by information that Mr. Jno. Hodgson of Beeston, Gent: gave a neck of Land joyning on Beeston Chappell yard only a Channell of Water running betwixt them to the use of the Chappell & since hath builded the Chappell Wall.

Mr. Tho. Idle of Houlbeck, salter, by his last Will & Testament bearing date the 10th of Febr. anno Dom: 1679 did amongsi other things give & bequeath in these words: Item I give to the Chappell of Houlbeck the sum of one hundred pounds of lawfull English money to purchase a parcell of Land within 2 or 3 years next following after my death, which I leave to my executors to doe, and the consideration thereof being six pounds p. ann: or the profit thereupon riseing to be disposed of and paid to a preaching Minister of God's word at Houlbeck Chappell for the time being for the better advancement of his place and Cure. And I do hereby make & appoint Peter Glover, Ew^a Wildman & Tho: Lee of Houlbeck and Jno. Geldert of Armley Feoffees in trust for the same & paying the minister the same abovesaid and when it happens any of the said Feoffees do dye then the next surviving to make & appoint another in his roome from time to time but if there happen to be such a vacancie of such a minister at the said Chappell of Houlbeck by the space of Six months together then my will & mind is that the said consideration or profits rising out of the froo shall be disposed of by the said Feoffees to the preaching minister of God's word at Armley Chappell during such vacancie at Houlbeck as aforesaid.

Jno. Walker, batchlor, of Armley in his last will bearing date the [blank] did give & bequeath the sum of £40 to Tho: Meadow & Mat: Hall in trust that the Interest thereof to be paid to the Minister at Armley Chappell for ever. The Town is now in suit about it with Sam: Squire who purchased Jno: Walker's Land.

Mr. Morley of Bramley by his will bearing date [blank] did give and bequeath to the minister of Bramley Chappell one tenement & an Orchard with a Croft in Bramley after the death of Richd. Morley also fro to the poor of the said town. Mr. Gamoll & Mr. Middlebrough and — Wood trustees for the same.

Also the Jury doth find that Jno. Savill & Tho. Savill, Knight, by their deed bearing date the 15th September in the 17th of King James of England Anno 1619 did give & grant to Benjam. Wade, Dan: Foxcroft & others all that parcell of ground with the appurtenances in Headingley where a new Chappell is lately erected with the said Chappell & Chappell yard thereunto adjoining for ever upon confidence that the said Feofees shall from time to time provide a good learned minister or Clergyman to read & celebrate divine service and to administer the sacrament in the same.

Mr. Benja: Wayd, Alderm: did by his will dated 1670 give unto the Chappell of Heddingley to persons in trust the sum of £200 to be laid out in land & the profit to goe to the minister of the said Chappell for ever also there was 30s. or 40s. more p. annum left by one of Burley to the minister of the said Chappell but his name I have not yet heard.

There is belonging to the preaching minister of Farnley Chappell Six pounds thirteen shill: & four pence paid out of the Audit at Pontefract if there be a preaching minister at it, if none then none payd.

Chappell Town Chappell. There is only a bare Chappell, the Chappell Garth is let off by the owner of the ground which is Mr. Killingbeck of Moor Grange, that so the minister of the Chappell is maintained by the offering of the people.

Many letters written by Plaxton to Thoresby will be found in "Letters to Ralph Thoresby," ante vol. xxi, in Hunter's "Thoresby's Correspondence," and in D. H. Atkinson's "Ralph Thoresby, his Town and Times."

Pork or East Bar, Leeds.

The plan here reproduced was formerly in the possession of the late Mr. John Tweedale, of Leeds, solicitor, who kindly allowed a tracing to be made, and stated that it was with the papers relating to "Smithies Garth" which was purchased by Wade's Trustees and by them leased to the Leeds Corporation to be used as an Open Space.

Smithies Garth is bounded by Richmond Street, Ellerby Road, Zion Street, and Bow Street, and probably became the property of the Tweedale family through the marriage, about the end of 1819, of "Mr. John Tweedale of Dewsbury, woolstapler, to Mary only daughter of Mr. Smithies of Hill House Bank."

The plan was evidently drawn with the principal idea of showing the Plaintiff Lister's "Narr Close" and the Defendant Bridges' "Stepping Close," and the roads were added without much regard to their actual position. The dispute probably had reference to the Defendant's right of road through the Plaintiff's close over the narrow road shown on the plan.

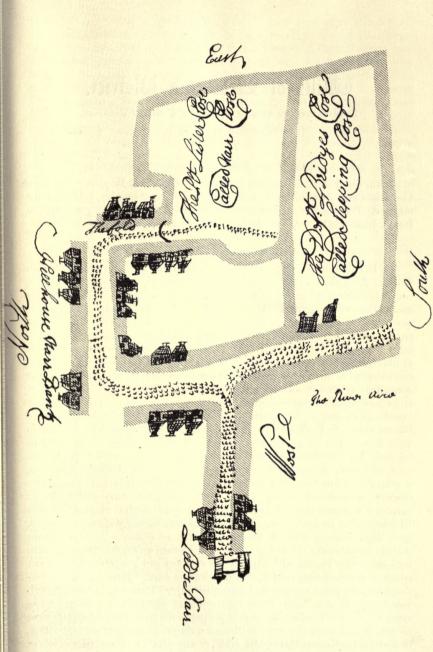

The Plaintiff Lister may have been of the family of John Lister mentioned in the Wills of the two John Jacksons (pp. 13 and 14 ante).

The Defendant Bridges may have been either Thomas of Leeds, mercer, 1683–1736, or John, his brother, 1686–1736, of Leeds, salter (see "History of Barwick-in-Elmet," ante vol. xvii, 298). If so the plan may be dated early eighteenth century.

The plan is chiefly interesting on account of its giving probably the only illustration extant of one of the Leeds Bars. There is a stone in the east end of the Parish Churchyard wall in Kirkgate, showing its position, and inscribed "East Bar." It will be noticed that the height of the turrets is greater than that of the houses.

The roads are Kirkgate and Marsh Lane from the Bar, branching towards the north, and East Street, otherwise the Causeway, branching towards the south, near the river Aire, as shown in the map. The turrets of the Bar were probably large enough to hold two or more watchmen as guards. East Bar has been also described as York Bar. In North Street is a stone showing the position of the North Bar. In Guildford Street is a stone inscribed Burley Bar. West Bar was at the west end of Boar Lane.
